Please review your reports, as we only deal with negative marks on the report, the day we start working a file. We cannot foresee any new information that might show up, weeks or months later, in a file.

At this time during Covid19, credit adjustment time is averaging, 10-12 weeks to remove the negative information.

During this period please pay for your Experian account. After we complete our services, you can cancel your account or change passwords, if you choose to do so.

During the adjustment period, please "DO NOT" apply for credit. Be a little patient.

Please forward any documents asap, from your alleged creditors, or the credit bureaus, so we can keep them on the clock, and keep the pressure on them.

Unfortunately, although we do pursue the highest score, we cannot guarantee a score. The scores are based on 3 different areas in your personal financial history: one negative/positive marks in your credit file, another being length of credit history, and lastly, different types of credit, (revolving-installment, housing).

Personally, I've seen scores adjust in 3 weeks. Unfortunately, I have also seen a couple take 5-6 months. The bureaus are not our friends.

The process we use is the same. The first round we send to the alleged creditors, that takes a week or so, and allows them to get into their system. The next round, we attack the credit bureaus. That is another week or so of mail time. Then depending on the bureau's cycle, whatever time it takes them to input. Most of it is mail time and not the actual work, that can extend the process.

Also please note, we ONLY deal with the bureaus, some lenders, AMEX, and DISCOVER, who are notorious for suing their alleged debtors, depending on the dollar amount, of the alleged debt. This is a separate service. We can help and advice, but a separate cost will incur if it ever comes to that, as a separate team works the legal issues.
